Silent night, night of love, is a well-known Austrian Christmas carol originally composed in German by the Austrian schoolmaster and organist Franz Xaver Gruber, the lyrics were made by the Austrian priest Joseph Mohr. It was declared Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity in 2011 the song has been recorded by many singers and in various musical genres, the version of Bing Crosby is the most popular worldwide being the third best-selling single in history. The music currently being played differs slightly from Gruber's original, particularly in the final notes. How to play silent night on recorder Well, now let's go with the Silent night recorder notes. We have to pay special attention to the time signature because it's a 3/4, that means we have three quarter notes in each beat. So the rhythmic feeling is ternary like any waltz. Pay special attention to the high notes that are perhaps the most difficult to obtain for it you will have to cover only the half of the back hole of your recorder. Do you want to get into the holiday spirit on the recorder?Are you looking for more recorder tunes to play?If you're a nerd like me, you always want to learn new recorder songs. Sometimes it's a struggle to find the sheet music for some songs, and then it's a struggle to learn it. As a music teacher for over a decade, I completely understand. This is exactly why I decided to write this article for Silent Night recorder sheet music and how to play it. Learning how to play Silent Night on the recorder with sheet music isn't hard if you note what to look for. It has a large range, using all natural notes from Low C to high F. Let's hop into this lovely holiday song and master it on the soprano recorder. Silent Night Recorder NotesThis song is an excellent review of all the natural notes on the recorder. Or, at least, the main ones you'll run into. Here are the notes used in this song. Low CLow DLow ELow FGABHigh CHigh DHHigh EHigh FMake sure to click the link on the notes above for more details on how to play the specific note if you're struggling. If you don't know all these notes yet, this song may take a little longer to learn, but it's still doable. Just make sure you follow the practice tips and steps below. I suggest you practice playing these notes in order up and down (like a scale) before putting them together as a whole song. Silent Night Recorder Sheet Music Here is the Silent Night sheet music for the recorder. By the way, you may also want to check out Baby Shark for recorder. You'll notice a couple of parts to watch for when learning to play this song. First, the notes need to be mastered. But if you followed my advice in the previous section, you should be good there. Next, the time signature is 3/4. This isn't hard, but it may feel weird to those who haven't done a lot of singing or playing in this time signature. For reference, just think of the songs Take Me Out To The Ballgame and The Star-Spangled Banner. These are both in 3/4.Rhythmically, this is a perfect song for reinforcing dotted quarter-eighth notes as the rhythm shows up over and over again. How To Play Silent Night On The RecorderIn this section, I'll offer my Silent Night recorder tutorial. As with learning any song on any instrument, you'll want to follow these tips: Break it into chunksPractice one chunk at a timeStart slow until you've mastered it; then speed upIsolate the tricky partsDon't practice until you get it right; practice until you can't get it wrongLet's get into the details (don't forget to reference the recorder notation above as needed). #1 Master The Opening PhraseLook at the opening 4 measures. You'll notice they use the notes, C, A, and E. Clap the rhythms, finger the notes, and then play it. This part won't cause you much trouble, but it's still good to focus on mastering it before putting it together with the rest. #2 Add In The High D SkipThe next section gets a little trickier. You're looking at measures 5-8. It starts on high D and slowly skips down. Take your time to get this right as well. #3 Put Together The Opening PhraseWith measures 1-8 practiced, it's time to put them together. If you spent time mastering #1 and #2, then the only tricky part here is the low E to high D jump. If this is messing you up, spend time just playing those two notes back and forth. #4 Learn The A Phrase (Twice)Next is measures 9-12. The notes here are much easier than in the previous section. The only part you may get tripped up on is the A-high C skip. Other than this, it's easy! Plus, it repeats, so you've learned more even faster. #5 High F LineNow, we're looking at the hardest part of the song, measures 13-20. It's here we use our highest notes. Don't forget to half cover the thumbhole for high E and high F. You may also want to intensify the air to help you jump up the octave, but don't overblow. The second half of this section is similar to the ending of the first, so it's really the opening 4 measures of this section you may struggle with. Just take your time and be patient. You can do it! #6 Put Second Phrase TogetherIt's time to put #4 and 5 together in one go. Set a metronome at a slow speed to help you learn it without pausing. #7 Play The Whole SongFinally, it's time to play the whole song. I recommend you start doing the whole song with fingers and saying the letter note names only. This will give you practice on getting those fingers down. Then, do the whole song while actually playing. Congrats! You did it! Other Holiday Recorder ResourcesHere are a few of my favorite holiday recorder books on Amazon. It's one a lot of newer players will find doable for the soprano recorder. Recorder Christmas Tunes With Note Names - A lot of folks struggle with memorizing note names on the staff; I get it. I know it just takes practice, but in the meantime, you want to learn some music. This book is for you. It has holiday tunes, all with the note names printed by the notes. Christmas Carols For Alto Recorder - If you've met me or talked to me about the recorder, you'll know I love the alto recorder. For anyone serious about the recorder, I encourage you to get an alto. You'll love the mellow and slightly lower-pitched sound. This book is all arrangements for the alto. Check it out at the link. Final ThoughtsI hope this Silent Night recorder sheet music and how to helps you learn this beautiful and challenging holiday song (Also, check out Jingle Bells on the recorder here). The isolated high F and repetitive dotted quarter-eighth make this an excellent teaching song. Regardless, don't give and keep on practicing.
